A Message from Stanford University about construct on Escondido Road

Stanford University is building a new home for the Children's Center of the Stanford Community (CCSC). CCSC has served the university community for decades as a highly regarded, parent-cooperative early education program. The current location of CCSC is near Stanford Federal Credit Union off of Serra Street. The program is in modular buildings that are well past their useful life. In 2016, Stanford identified an opportunity to re-purpose another property that has been part of the university child care system to accommodate the relocation of CCSC and to increase childcare enrollment within its programs. Because of the immense popularity of the CCSC program and the university's child care waiting list, the new CCSC will enable an expansion from the current 144 families, to a total capacity of 225 when the program is fully enrolled.

The identified new site for CCSC is directly across the road from Escondido Elementary School and Bing Nursery, on land that was once home to the Rainbow School and Pepper Tree House programs. These programs have been retired and these buildings will be demolished to make way for the new CCSC. After a lengthy planning process which has included active engagement within the CCSC community, as well as discussion with Escondido Elementary School and Bing Nursery School, we are excited that the project is ready to move forward with an anticipated opening date of Fall 2018.

In the next few weeks you will begin to see activity on the property. We want to point you toward some resources for further information on the project and how you will be able to stay up-dated throughout the project's duration. Regular project updates can be found at <https://headsup.stanford.edu/CCSC>. The project management will also provide the administrative teams at Escondido School and Bing Nursery regular updates and alerts that they will provide in their regular, on-going community communications. Should you have questions about the project now or in the future, please contact Brad Wells, Project Manager, at jbwells@stanford.edu.
